

Data is often distributed differently

What are the pros and cons of putting everything into a single table?

Data is often distributed across different tables

What are the pros and cons of putting everything into a single table?

Each table has keys that link it to other tables

